Terence and Mary are knocked out by the dynamite explosion. The rustlers steal the treasure and from Mary and depart before she regains consciousness. Terence and Mary immediately become aware of their loss when they come upon the shape of Bud Higgins, the tramp, overhead.

Terence and Mary climb off on a motorcycle, but the rustlers follow and climb down the ladder at the rear of the machine. Mary jumps on the cyclist and turns up a hill. The rustlers follow and battle it out. Bud Higgins, while the rustlers are fighting, turns out. Mary wins.

Terence and Mary are back in time to find the rustlers have advanced to her. Mary keeps the rustlers from fighting and believes that Taggart is one of her father's men.

Terence and Mary's gang of rustlers run and attack the rustlers, but soon flee when they discover that the woods about them is afire. Terence and Mary are left alone. Mary falls, and Terence picks her up, stumbling blindly into the raging flames.

Terence and Mary are knocked out by the dynamite explosion. The rustlers steal the treasure map from Mary and depart before she regains consciousness. Terence and she immediately become aware of their loss when they come to and see help in the shape of Bud Hughes, the tramp aviator who is circling overhead.

One of the rustlers make off on a motorcycle, but the plane soon overtakes him and Bud climbs down the ladder at the risk of his life and jumps on the cyclist who turns up a hill. The men fall to the ground and battle it out. Bud wins and takes the map away, restoring it to Mary. Meanwhile the plane scares off the bandits' horses.

Mary and Terence climb a mount in the vicinity of the treasure's hiding place. Mary becomes faint and Terence goes for some water. He soon hears her cry for aid and rushes back in time to interfere with Taggart who is making advances to her. Mary keeps the men from fighting because she believes that Taggart is one of her father's friends.

Meanwhile Taggart's gang of rustlers rush up and attack the three, but soon flee when they discover that the woods about them is afire. Terence and Mary are left alone. Mary faints, and Terence picks her up, stumbling blindly into the raging flames.
